

Your guide to NZ Copyright

Let's do the right thing

Copyright on Your University Campus

Each University will have its own procedures for ensuring that the terms of the licence they hold with Copyright Licensing New Zealand (CLNZ) are observed. Any enquiries regarding the guidelines set out in this document should be directed to the person designated by the Vice-Chancellor to deal with copyright matters.

Information for University Staff and Students

Copyright law provides a balance between the right of creators of copyright works to obtain a return for their efforts and the right of the public to access those works. In New Zealand, the Copyright Act 1994 controls copying from copyright works such as books and periodicals (journals). The Act permits individuals to copy extracts from copyright works for the purpose of research or private study. It also allows the University to make multiple copies of extracts from copyright works, within strictly defined limits, for educational purposes.

To extend the copying limits provided under the Act New Zealand universities have purchased a copyright licence from CLNZ. This licence covers certain copying from hard copy (i.e. printed) originals and protects universities, staff, and students where copying takes place within these extended limits. Otherwise the Copyright Act provisions remain in force. We ask that you read and retain this fact sheet as it contains guidelines for compliance with the licence.

Compliance guidelines

CLNZ, on behalf of copyright owners, has entered into a licence agreement ("the licence") with New Zealand universities ("licensed universities") to enable copying beyond the copying limits set by the Copyright Act.

The licence protects universities, their staff, and duly authorised agents against an alleged breach of copyright, provided copies are made in accordance with the licence.

The licence covers the making of multiple copies of copyright works from hard-copy originals. These copies may be included in course packs or compilations ("coursepacks"), distributed either in hardcopy or electronic (i.e. digital) format to enrolled students and staff involved in the course of instruction. The licence also covers multiple copies of copyright materials made by students as agents of the university acting in accordance with the instructions of staff, where those copies are to be used during instruction at the University. For the avoidance of doubt, enrolled students and staff involved in the course of instruction may print from their electronic course pack for their own use without breaching the terms of the licence. No further copies may be made or distributed. An appropriate warning notice (as shown below) must be provided with each course pack to make recipients aware of this.

Staff have legal and ethical obligations to ensure that each extract of copyright material copied is fully and accurately attributed. They must clearly identify the source of each item of copyright material contained in coursepacks. The attribution information is used in e-reporting which enables CLNZ to determine the appropriate value of licensing fees due to copyright owners for the copying. CLNZ does this by calculating the number of pages of each author's/publisher's copyright material copied under the licence.

Licence coverage

In general, the licence permits staff and their duly authorised agents to copy the following extracts from books, periodicals, newspapers and journals:

- Up to 10% or one chapter of a work, whichever is the larger;
- Up to 15 pages of a single work in a collection of works even if the work is published separately;
- Up to one article from a periodical publication—additional articles if they are on the same subject;
- An artistic work (such as an illustration) published in a work;
- From the same work within 14 days of it last being copied provided that it is not for the same paper, unit or module of a course of study (note that the Act permits repeat copying after 14 days);
- An out of print work, , subject to providing appropriate evidence to CLNZ that the work is unavailable in sufficient quantity within a reasonable time at the normal price. Electronic copies can be distributed by means of:
 - A password protected University Intranet; or
 - Email; or
 - A CD/DVD

Students receiving a copy must be enrolled in a relevant course and staff receiving a copy must be involved in the course of instruction.

Note: For the purposes of the licence, “copy” includes both the actual making of a copy and its subsequent distribution.

The above limits apply only where copies are made for the educational purposes of a licensed university. A staff member cannot rely on the licence to copy materials for use in a course offered by any other educational establishment unless it is also a licensed university.

Material not covered

The licence does not cover certain types of copyright material. This material must be copied in accordance with the Copyright Act, another licence or the terms under which the material was purchased. Where appropriate, specific permission to copy this material should be obtained from the copyright owner.

The following materials may not be copied under the licence:

- Any materials downloaded from the Internet
- Any materials sourced from an electronic database
- Printed music (including the words)
- Loose maps and charts
- Unpublished religious orders of service
- House journals (publications for employees)
- Photographs and/or illustrations published separately from a work

- Works stipulating that they may not be copied under a copyright licence of this nature
- Privately owned work issued for tuition purposes and limited to a clientele who pay fees
- Theses, dissertations, and student papers

Copyright Warning Notice

Every course pack produced and distributed, whether in hard copy or electronic format, must be accompanied by the following copyright warning notice. This is a requirement of the licence.

Copyright Warning Notice

This course pack may be used only for the University's educational purposes. It includes extracts of copyright works copied under copyright licences. You may not copy or distribute any part of this course pack to any other person. Where this course pack is provided to you in electronic format you may only print from it for your own use. You may not make a further copy for any other purpose. Failure to comply with the terms of this warning may expose you to legal action for copyright infringement and/or disciplinary action by the University.
